To Whom it May Concern

Testimonial for Xiong Qian Cheng

Qian Cheng served as an intern under my supervision for 7 weeks (August-September 2010). He came to the Defence Psychology Department (DPD) on an internship program jointly organised by the MINDEF Scholarship Centre and NUS High School. During his internship, Qian Cheng did extensive research regarding the use of incentives in administering surveys. With his well-honed research skills, Qian Cheng was able to carry out the project effectively.

The internship concluded with a presentation of Qian Cheng's findings to the DPD psychologists. Many of the psychologists felt that his research was adequately extensive and his points were clear and precise. They were all very impressed with his abilities both as a presenter and a researcher.

I have also had many opportunities to interact with Qian Cheng both formally in the office and informally over meals. I found him to be an intelligent individual who has an enthusiasm for learning new things. He was usually able to provide accurate and convincing answers when questioned about his project. Throughout his internship, Qian Cheng would also ask many insightful questions and request for additional books or articles to read.

On the whole, Qian Cheng has great potential and will strive to do well in whatever he undertakes. His proactive and enthusiastic nature would certainly benefit any institution or organisation which decides to accept him either as a student or as an employee.

Sincerely,
